Aims and Scope

Child Abuse Review will provide a forum for all professionals working in the field of child protection, giving them access to the latest research findings, practice developments, training initiatives and policy issues. The Journal's remit will include all forms of maltreatment, whether they occur inside or outside the family environment. Articles will be written in a style appropriate for a multidisciplinary audience. Papers from outside Britain will be welcome.

It is intended to maintain a practice orientated focus and authors of research papers will be encouraged to examine and discuss implications for practitioners. By always emphasising research/practice links, it is the Editor's aim to promote practice relevant research and to facilitate the use of research findings, to enhance good practice and influence policy.

The Editorial Board, in all its activities, will seek to prevent discrimination on the grounds of age, gender, racial origin, culture, religious belief, language, disability, economic status or political views.

Each issue will aim to include refereed review articles, research and practice papers, a training update, case studies, book reviews and a calendar of future events. To keep readers informed of new developments each issue will contain several 'notes' drawn from the fields of Law, Social Work, Nursing, Medicine, Psychology, Education and Forensic Science. Correspondence from readers will be much welcomed, and it is hoped that these letters (edited where appropriate) will form a lively feature within the journal.

The views expressed in the articles in this volume are those of the authors and are not necessarily those of BASPCAN, the Editorial Board or the Organisations to which the authors are affiliated.
